MOBRIO RELEASES moJava, A CUTTING-EDGE MOBLOGGING TOOL FOR MOBILE HANDSETS

Mobrio, the London-based mobile web services company and owners of the popular openZpace and theZpace hosted blogging services, announced today the beta release of moJava, an intuitive and feature-rich moblogging tool for leading mobile phones.

"moJava truly extends the networked community by making moblogging as quick, easy and powerful as blogging from a personal computer." remarked Julian Swallow, Mobrio's CEO. "Our background in mobile software development meant that it was only a matter of time before we released a tool to allow users of openZpace and theZpace, or indeed other leading hosted blogging services, to properly access their blogs from a mobile phone."

Swallow continues, "We evaluated all the moblogging clients we could find and using this research and our experience in architecting mobile software solutions, we built moJava. The team at Mobrio feels that the result is quite simply the most powerful and easy-to-use mobile blogging tool available today. moJava pushes the functionality envelope for Java™ enabled handsets."

moJava has a wealth of features:

- View, edit, delete and add to any compatible blog as easily as on a PC
- Powerful text formatting support; alignment, bold, colour, fonts, italics, lists, strikethrough, tables and underline
- Comprehensive image support
- Cache content to view when convenient – read blog items when you are on the tube!
- Read RSS news feeds on your mobile when using a theZpace or openZpace blog
- Save on airtime by downloading just blog titles or by setting a maximum number of blog items to be downloaded
- Create different profiles to monitor and maintain all your blogs
- Supports Blogger™, metaWeblog™ and Moveable Type™ APIs
- Incorporates a comprehensive help facility
- Written in J2ME™ to ensure compatibility with a wide range of handsets
